Father stabbed twice in bizarre train altercation

Upper Darby. Police superintendent on stabber: "I think there may be some mental health issues there."

Shortly after a bag of trash was thrown at a 6-month-old baby boy's stroller on a SEPTA Market-Frankford Line train Tuesday night, his father was stabbed twice outside the 69th Street Terminal by the trash-thrower, police said.

Upper Darby Police Superintendent Michael Chitwood said Wednesday the 23-year-old Philly father was riding on the train with his son around 6:30 p.m. Tuesday.

During the journey to the 69th Street stop, 25-year-old Anthony Wollor, of Lansdowne, inexplicably threw a paper bag full of trash that hit the baby's stroller.

Anthony Wollor is identified as the suspect. / UDP

"Whether he did it intentionally or not, I don't know," Chitwood said. "But then he continued to walk into another [train] car."

When the train stopped, the father and son hopped off and met the man's girlfriend — the boy's mother. Once outside, the Philadelphia man spotted Wollor.

"And he goes up to him and says, 'Hey, what did you throw trash at my child for?" Chitwood said.

The two then started fighting in front of the baby and the baby's mother. During the exchange, Wollor pulled out a knife and stabbed the father twice in the back.

Chitwood said the knife was between a four and five inches long.

The father was taken to the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania where he is listed in critical but stable condition.

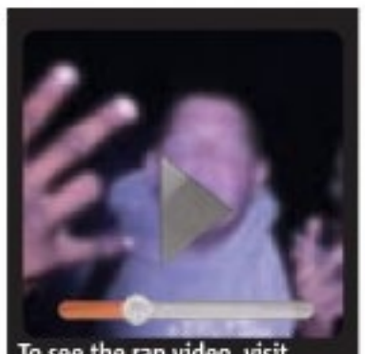
Teens under investigation for rap video with drugs, gun

NE Philly. A rap video showing minors committing crimes went viral, leading to a police investigation.

A person allegedly holding a gun and a bottle of alcohol is seen in the video. / YOUTUBE

Police confirmed Wednesday they are "reviewing" a music video by rapper Apex P featuring Philadelphia students smoking marijuana, posted on YouTube this week, but no criminal charges have been reported yet.

The video for "Creep with Me" by Apex P, which sources believe was shot in the vacant 70-acre former Coke company site in Bridesburg, features teens smoking marijuana, drinking alcohol and at one point holding a gun.



To see the rap video, visit Metro.us. / YOUTUBE

"We are aware of the video and we're reviewing it," said Lt. Dennis Rosenbaum of the Northeast Detectives Division. "We haven't made any decisions on it."

Sources said some of the minors in the video were students at Franklin Towne Charter High School in Bridesburg. The school did not respond to requests for comment.

Apex P did not answer a request for comment, but video director DJ Bey said everyone participated willingly. "It's just business," Bey said via email. "I asked, did everyone wanna be in the film? They said yes, That's on them."

Bridesburg Town Watch leader Frank Kruzinski said it was just "stupidity."

"There's drugs, there's twerking, some of these girls are 13 years old. … But it's the gun that really shocks me," Kruzinski said.

The land where the video was rumored to be filmed has been vacant since 1982 and is a frequent site of parties. It is owned by National Grid. Councilman Bobby Henon had proposed using the land for a recycling company, but the community opposed that.

"Our office is gathering any information on this and similar incidents at the site reported to police [along with the video, if and when it's authenticated]. This will be shared with National Grid, which owns the property," said Henon's spokesman, Eric Horvath, in an email.

$$$. Clarke proposes moving prison funds to re-entry programs

A bill introduced by City Council President Darrell Clarke seeks to transfer $500,000 from the Philadelphia Prisons System budget to programs that could hire citizens returning from incarceration to provide landscaping and cleaning services on vacant, abandoned lots.

"We want to increase opportunities for people who have had challenges in their lives being returning citizens," Clarke said. "When a person gets a second chance for employment, you can reduce the recidivism rate."

But city officials questioned the proposal.

"We support the premise of the bill," said Philadelphia Public Safety Director Mike Resnick. "But I don't think it's the best funding mechanism to take money from a prison system that needs to house, feed, care for and medicate inmates to pay for this program."

Resnick said city programs like PowerCorpsPHL, RISE and CLIP already offer opportunities to returning citizens and handle vacant lots.

But Clarke said re-entry programs should be a higher priority. "We want to be in a position as maintenance season starts in spring for this to be up and running," he said.

The bill passed committee Wednesday and will head to a vote before Council. SAM NEWHOUSE

Canada's parliament attacked, soldier is fatally shot nearby

Violence. The shootings followed an attack on two soldiers on Monday carried out by a convert to Islam.

A gunman attacked Canada's parliament on Wednesday, with gunfire erupting near where Prime Minister Stephen Harper was speaking, and a soldier was fatally shot at a nearby war memorial, stunning the Canadian capital.

The gunman, identified by CNN as Michael Zehaf-Bibeau, was shot dead in the parliament building and Harper was safely removed in incidents that may have been linked to Islamic militants.

Witness accounts indicated the man who shot dead the soldier guarding the National War Memorial in central Ottawa, went on to attack the parliament building minutes later. Canadian police said however they could not "at this point" confirm it was the same person.

Witnesses said a flurry of shots were fired after a gunman entered the parliament building, pursued by police.

The assault took place very near the room where Harper was meeting with members of his Conservative party, a government minister said.

The incident, shocking in Canada's normally tranquil capital, began shortly before 10 a.m. ET and was not over late in the afternoon. REUTERS

Shooting

Guns drawn in parliament

Dramatic video footage posted by the Globe and Mail newspaper showed police with guns drawn inside the main parliament building. At least a dozen loud bangs can be heard on the clip, echoing through the hallway.

Veterans Affairs Minister Julian Fantino, a former policeman, told the Toronto Sun that parliament's head of security, Sergeant-at-Arms Kevin Vickers, shot dead a suspected gunman.

Canadian cabinet minister Jason Kenney said a guard in parliament buildings was also wounded. REUTERS

US jury convicts ex-Blackwater guards in killings

Iraq. The verdict comes more than seven years after the shooting.

In a sweeping victory for the government, a federal jury on Wednesday found four former Blackwater guards guilty on nearly every count they faced in connection with the 2007 killing of 14 unarmed Iraqis.

Jurors found three of the ex-guards guilty of manslaughter and weapons charges, and a fourth guilty of murder.

A court clerk read the jury's verdict aloud to a packed courtroom, repeating the word "guilty" 71 times as the defendants sat and listened silently.

Former Blackwater security guard Evan Liberty / GETTY IMAGES

Paul Slough, Dustin Heard and Evan Liberty were convicted of voluntary manslaughter in connection with at least 12 deaths at Nisur Square, where the Blackwater unit had been trying to clear a path for a U.S. State Department convoy. The Washington jury also found the three guilty of attempted manslaughter in connection with the wounding of at least 11 Iraqis at the site.

The fourth guard, Nicholas Slatten, was found guilty of murder in connection with the first death at the traffic circle. REUTERS

The 2007 shooting

The killings took place at a Baghdad traffic circle.

- The shooting stood out for its brazenness, even during a war replete with grisly incidents.
- It raised questions about the rules governing security contractors working overseas.

US officials tighten Ebola monitoring

U.S. health officials unveiled new measures on Wednesday to carry out Ebola monitoring on anyone entering the country from the three nations at the center of a West African epidemic, increasing precautions to stop the spread of the virus.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said that beginning Monday, travelers from Liberia, Sierra Leone and Guinea will be directed to check in with health officials every day and report their temperatures and any Ebola symptoms for 21 days, the period of incubation for the virus.

The travelers will be required to provide emails, phone numbers and addresses for 21 days, and the information will be shared with local health authorities.

The travelers will be required to coordinate with local public health officials if they intend to travel within the United States. If a traveler does not report in, local health officials will take immediate steps to find the person.

CDC Director Dr. Tom Frieden told reporters the active monitoring program will remain in place until the outbreak in West Africa is over. The U.N. World Health Organization's latest figures on Wednesday showed at least 4,877 people out of 9,936 cases have died in the outbreak, the worst on record. REUTERS

North Korea

Kerry says no deal made

U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry said on Wednesday there had been no deal with North Korea in the release of one of three detained Americans but that Washington was willing to resume talks if the reclusive country took steps toward denuclearization.

"We are very concerned about the remaining American citizens who are in North Korea, and we have great hopes that North Korea will see the benefits of releasing them also as soon as possible," Kerry said, referring to Kenneth Bae and Matthew Miller. REUTERS

Fowle back home in 'good health' after detention in North Korea

Released. Fowle was arrested in May for leaving a Bible at a sailor's club in the North Korean city of Chongjin.

American Jeffrey Fowle returned to his home in southern Ohio on Wednesday, with his lawyer saying he was in good health after a nearly half-year detention in reclusive North Korea.

Fowle, 56, had been one of three Americans held by Pyongyang, which typically has tried to use the release of foreign captives as a way to build domestic political support for its leaders.

Fowle needs time to adjust to his life back home in a Dayton suburb before addressing the media about his ordeal, Tepe said, adding that the family wanted to offer its thanks to the U.S. State Department, the Embassy of Sweden and others for securing his release.

North Korea, where recent health problems of young leader Kim Jong-un have raised questions about his grip on power, tried to show that the release came after pleading from Washington.

"Kim Jong-un, first chairman of the National Defense Commission of the DPRK, took such a special measure as setting free Jeffrey Edward Fowle, U.S. criminal, taking into consideration the repeated requests of U.S. President Obama," its official KCNA news agency said. The North's official name is the Democratic People's Republic of Korea.

He was freed on Tuesday and flown from Pyongyang on a U.S. government plane, without any quid pro quo, U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry said.

The isolated state, which tries to portray the Kim family that has ruled it for more than 60 years as demigods, is particularly sensitive to religious proselytizing.

The White House on Tuesday said the United States welcomed the release of Fowle, a street repair worker, but pressed Pyongyang to free the two remaining Americans. REUTERS

Quoted

"Jeff would like you to know that he was treated well by the government of the DPRK and that he's currently in good health."

Bariatric surgery can be safe and effective in helping some men and women lose weight and reduce health risks.[1-3] The range for weight loss in some studies is from approximately 29% to 87% of excess body weight after surgery,[4-10] but the average excess weight loss is about 50%. Your results may be different and amount of excess weight loss will vary with the type of bariatric operation performed. Ask your doctor what to expect and if bariatric surgery is right for you. Today, Rosie O'Donnell is crowd-sourcing her job, Russell Brand is feeling welcomed and embraced, Taye Diggs is spreading lies about Sting, Zachary Quinto is on Team Zellweger and Miles Teller is asking the tough questions.

@Rosie: What topic should we discuss on the view today ?

@rustyrockets: Media reaction to my UNRELEASED book - "Who are you to say anything?" or "How dare you say something".

@TayeDiggs: Sting is the coolest dude I know and he's 98 but he looks younger because he uses sunscreen.

@ZacharyQuinto: kudos to renee zellweger for responding with grace and intelligence to a deluge of unfounded accusation. A classy and thoughtful statement.

@Miles_Teller: Does anyone actually own a chia pet.. And if so, how do you have the time to take care of it with all of your cats?

1 Zellweger speaks out about her, um, 'different look'

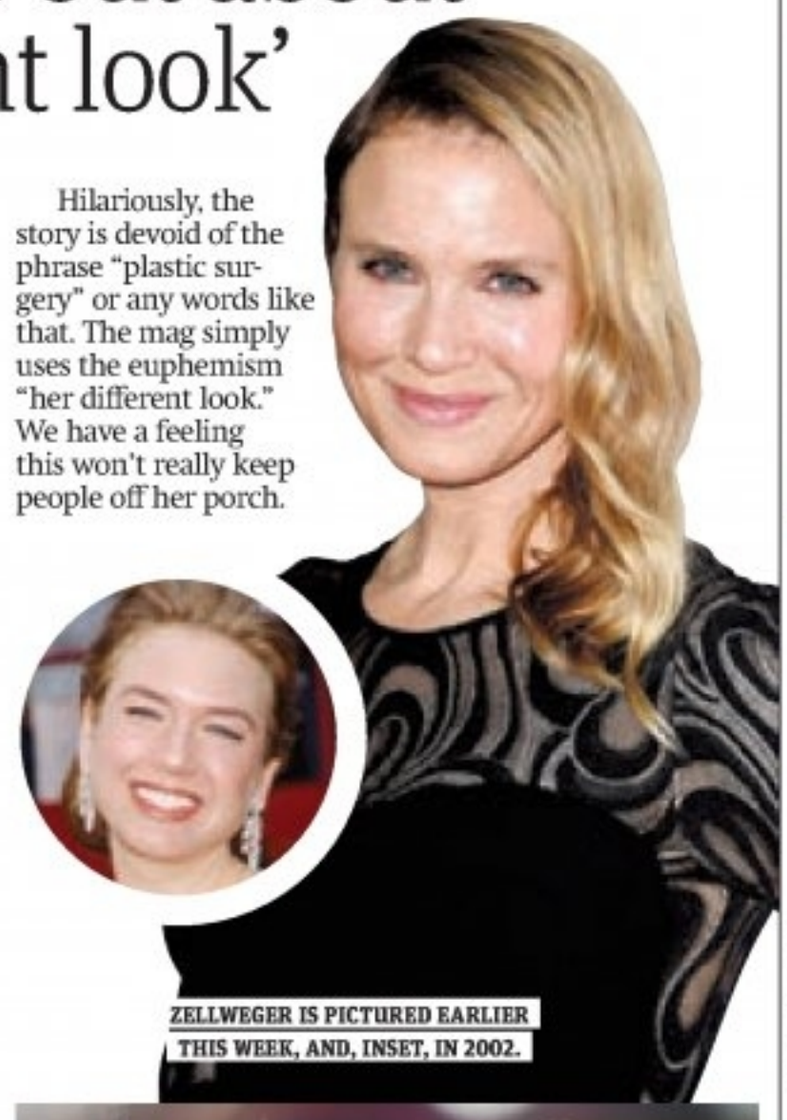
If you were anywhere near the Internet earlier this week, you heard about Renee Zellweger and reactions to her recent red carpet appearance. Or, more specifically, reactions to her face. It's a little odd that the story got so much attention, because the actress had been photographed in public last month (see page 18) and nobody made a big deal about it. Well, a big deal was certainly made earlier this week, and apparently, Zellweger was listening. In a move uncharacteristic of celebrity culture, she has offered a response. Only it's more awesome in theory than in practice. "I'm glad folks think I look different! I'm living a different, happy, more fulfilling life, and I'm thrilled that perhaps it shows," she tells People magazine. "It seems the folks who come digging around for some nefarious truth which doesn't exist won't get off my porch until I answer the door."

Zellweger somehow pulls off being both folksy and coy!

"My friends say that I look peaceful. I am healthy. For a long time I wasn't doing such a good job with that," she says.

As for talk of a drastic change in her appearance? That's just time, baby: "People don't know me in my 40s," Zellweger explains. "People don't know me healthy for a while. Perhaps I look different. Who doesn't as they get older? But I am different. I'm happy."

Hilariously, the story is devoid of the phrase "plastic surgery" or any words like that. The mag simply uses the euphemism "her different look." We have a feeling this won't really keep people off her porch.



ZELLWEGER IS PICTURED EARLIER THIS WEEK, AND, INSET, IN 2002.

A superhero brawl breaks out in Hollywood

New Yorkers have to contend with costumed comic book and movie characters in Times Square hocking photo opps to tourists lately, but it's also been a regular fixture on Hollywood Boulevard for years. And sometimes with that many superheroes around, it gets messy. This week, a brawl broke out between a few of the colorful characters, creating one of the most entertaining local news play-by-plays in recent memory.

1 "At the beginning, we see Mr. Incredible and Batgirl struggling. Chewbacca tries to break it up. Batgirl scratches Mr. Incredible," local CBS reporter Suzanne Marques reports. This is what you see in the image above.

2 "Waldo and Freddy Krueger step in. They try to hold back Mr. Incredible, who gets loose, chases Batgirl, throws a punch."

3 Another costumed vendor — who identifies himself only as Batman — says it's just the result of a bad element on the Walk of Fame. "The bad ones, they roam up and down, so they cross paths. ... It's less now because we have a lot more police presence here since last year." Last year, by the way, two Captain Americas beat up a Spider-Man, prompting more cops to patrol the area.

Harry Potter plays Quidditch with Yoda?

RADCLIFFE RECENTLY LET SLIP THAT HE'S SOMETHING OF A "STAR WARS" NEWBIE. "I HAD ONLY WATCHED THE FIRST THREE ORIGINAL MOVIES WITHIN THE LAST SIX MONTHS," HE SAYS. "I ADMITTED THAT TO [DIRECTOR] J.J. ABRAMS AND HE LOOKED AT ME LIKE HE MAYBE WANTED TO KILL ME FOR A SECOND." BUT THEN ABRAMS GOT OVER IT AND FINISHED FILMING RADCLIFFE'S SURPRISE "STAR WARS" CAMEO, RIGHT?

There are some places Daniel Radcliffe can't just casually show up without stirring up rumors and speculation. Case in point: a recent visit by the "Harry Potter" star to the set of the new "Star Wars" movie. Radcliffe insists to MTV News that he was just visiting some old friends — "All the 'Potter' crew were doing it, so I was mainly [there] to see them," he explains — and not to film a completely awesome, franchise-blending cameo. "I didn't realize I'd caused commotion. I'm not in the movie," Radcliffe says by way of apology.

3 Billy Bob opens up about Angie's blood

If you've been waiting for Billy Bob Thornton to address that whole Angelina Jolie wearing a vial of blood around her neck thing from more than a decade ago, well, first of all, you're weird. But it's your lucky day! While speaking at a university in LA recently, the actor said, "You know those lockets you buy that are clear and you put a picture of your granny in ... and wear it around your neck? That's what it was. ... She thought it would be interesting and romantic if we took a little razor blade and sliced our fingers, smeared a little blood on these lockets. ... From that, we were wearing quart jars of blood. And we were vampires and we lived in a dungeon." I knew it!

Hey, it's Jolie, Thornton and two vials of blood.

ADMIT ONE

Metro rounds up what's in cinemas this week.

Sad Keanu kills everyone in "John Wick" because they killed this dog. / DAVID LEE

'John Wick'

1 A not-very-memorable name titles a premise you won't soon forget: Keanu Reeves plays a retired assassin who decides to take out a mobster (Michael Nyqvist) and his seemingly endless minions after the bad guy's son kills his beagle.

'Ouija'

2 What's worse than a horror movie based on a "spirit board" (and one that holds zero supernatural powers, so stop thinking that)? There was already not only a movie but a franchise about this, the "Witchboard" trilogy.

'Birdman'

3 Michael Keaton plays a fading actor who once starred in a movie franchise about a winged superhero and is now putting on an ambitious Broadway show. Perhaps more interestingly, this comedy is all done as a fake single shot, thanks to "Babel" director Alejandro Gonzalez Inarritu.

'Dear White People'

4 One of Sundance's most deserving hits, this comedic drama examines racial tension and black identity at an Ivy League school when a group of white students plan a party lampooning black stereotypes. "Everyone Hates Chris" star Tyler James Williams leads.

'Whiplash'

5 While he was popping up on screens in last year's fairly evil "That Awkward Moment," Miles Teller was at Sundance scoring raves for his performance as an aspiring jazz drummer with a scary teacher (J.K. Simmons).

Philadelphia Film Festival

6 The second and last weekend of the PFF is among us, and you still have the chance to see the Reese Witherspoon-starring "Wild," the Jason Schwartzman-led "Listen Up Philip" and the sexploitation twist "The Duke of Burgundy."

'Fury'

7 Some are complaining that this war movie in which Brad Pitt kills Nazis is not "Inglourious Basterds." Look, Pitt is good at killing Nazis, so why not another, more serious one, this time with Logan Lerman and Shia LaBeouf?

'The Book of Life'

8 Horror and fantasy guru Guillermo del Toro ("The Strain") tries his hand at children's animation, putting his name on this tale of a young man hopping through multiple realms. Diego Luna and Channing Tatum lend their voices.

'The Best of Me'

9 Here's yet another Nicholas Sparks movie, and we're going to assume there's a hesitant romance in a pretty location and a comically melodramatic third-act twist. James Marsden and Michelle Monaghan star in this one.

CMJ programmer: 'Music is the most important thing'

Live shows. What does it take to be among the 1,300 acts performing in NYC this week?

Roughly 1,300 acts will perform throughout NYC as part of the CMJ Music Marathon. While this number may seem daunting, it's not even the half of it.

"It's about a 25 percent acceptance rate," says Matt McDonald, who programs artist showcases at CMJ.

"Music is the most important thing, obviously," says McDonald, "but we look at what kind of press they have, what kind of tour history they have, online profiles, what kind of team they have in place. If we commit to inviting them and if they commit to making the trip, whether that's across a bridge or across an ocean — the last thing we want for anybody is to play to an empty room — then we're really looking for bands who are at a point where playing CMJ can really benefit them."

Expert opinion

Who to see at CMJ

Who is Matt McDonald looking forward to seeing this year?

King Gizzard and the Lizard Wizard "Have you seen them? They are awesome live! They're a great rock band. There's either three or four guitars."

Moses Sumney "I haven't had the chance to see him live yet. He's from LA and he has a really impressive voice. It's a little bit on the new R&B side."

Spookyland "Spookyland are from Australia. The guy has a pretty interesting voice. I saw them live a couple months ago, and they were kind of all over the place in terms of influences, so that's one I would definitely like to check out again."

Spookyland / PROVIDED

Joey Bada$$ "Joey Bada$$ is an up-and-coming hip-hop act. ... He played two years ago when he was very, very new still."

And during the daytime. "Zola Jesus is doing a Q&A, Mac and Laura from Merge are doing a 'looking back on the Merge label' sort of thing and Tom Scharpling is going to do a Q-and-A. It will be interesting to see what he's been up to since 'The Best Show.'"

Fire, Lady Gaga, Avicii, Mumford and Sons — all played small rooms in previous years and broke out to bigger success because of the CMJ exposure.

McDonald, who's in his 10th year with CMJ, says one of the biggest differences this year is that attendees don't have to do too much advance research.

"It's the first year we've really had a top-notch app," he says. "With almost every band, you can just click on the link and with a festival like this, you have 1,300 acts and most people only know some of them, so just being able to hear it right then, right there can make a huge difference."

How to rock a cape

Capes aren't just for superheroes, witches and "Harry Potter" fans — they're one of the season's hottest trends. We asked three bloggers to show you how to pull off the look.

TOPSHOP MONOCHROME WOVEN CAPE WITH ALL-OVER GEO PRINT, $60, TOPSHOP.COM

Name: Aurelia Mamou
Age: 31
From: Paris
Blog: Absolutely Glamourous.fr

"Capes were all over the fall runways, with Saint Laurent going for a '60s vibe while Burberry went for a more casual blanket-thrown-over-the-shoulders look," says Mamou. "Styling the cape — like I've done with my Ted Baker pick here — is easier than it looks." For a modern take, Mamou says wear it with a hat, boyfriend jeans and a fringe bag.

Name: Nelia Belkova
Age: 30
From: Toronto, Canada
Blog: StyleBlog.ca

"In the fall, when the weather tends to be unpredictable, I love the idea of throwing on a cape jacket. This one's from H&M Studio Fall 2014 and can be worn with or without sleeves," says Belkova. To balance out the bulkiness of the coat, she suggests a slimmer silhouette on the bottom, like knee-high boots and skinny jeans. "In general, I recommend balancing out the cape by wearing slim-cut bottoms, or pairing a longer cape with a dress and tights in the fall."

Name: Amy Marietta
Age: 22
From: New York
Blog: VivereBella.com

"Capes make you feel elegantly powerful and give you a certain aura when you walk — superhero status, or as I like to say, 'girl boss status,'" says Marietta.

Her styling tips: Go with a bold color if you want to stand out.

"But you may get less wear out of your piece," she warns. "If you go with a neutral, you can style the look many ways and it will be a staple piece for your fall wardrobe."

To avoid looking too boxy, Marietta styled her look with a lightweight tan sweater, a high-waisted skirt, a leather cross body bag and tan ankle boots. Shauns sunglasses in taupe complete her look.

When writing a dating profile is a family affair

Experiments. A 20-something single asks those closest to her to play matchmaker.

Maybe your family knows you better than you think. / INGRAM PUBLISHING

Like many comedians and writers, L. Jean Schwartz often mines stories from her own life when she performs onstage, especially ones about what it's like being a single woman in Los Angeles.

The 20-something Schwartz had dabbled in online dating on and off for years and decided to create a new blog titled "The PostModern Matchmaker," which puts a twist on online dating: She asks her mother, brother and closest friends to take over her OkCupid account.

"At the start of the week, we rewrite the profile together and they sort of monitor the account during the week," she says.

Here are a few things Schwartz says the experiment taught her about both love and her family:

Your family notices cool things about you

"I volunteer at the community garden near my house, and I had never thought to put that in my profile," says Schwartz. Her mother suggested including it because she thought it revealed something new about her.

The matches were revealing

"My dad's a lawyer and my brother was an Eagle Scout and I'm a vegetarian writer," she says. "And my mom picked three people, and they were a lawyer, an Eagle Scout and a vegetarian writer." Schwartz noted that her mom hadn't realized the connection until she heard her joke about it in a set.

Dating was simple in the '70s

"Now I have regular conversations with both my parents about dates," Schwartz says, recalling that she once said she didn't ask men out. "They were in the dating scene in the '70s, when girls would ask guys out," she says. "She was surprised I felt that way. It really made me think about those rules. Why don't I ask guys out?"

Things can get uncomfortable

Schwartz describes her brother as a romantic at heart. "He did a first draft of [my profile] and he said something like, 'Write back if you are interested in participating in an experiment where I'm really hoping to fall in love,'" she recalls. "And I said, 'Whoa.'"

Ultimately, that line didn't make the final draft.

Profile questions

Moms are pretty genuine

Working with her mother on her online dating profile was an interesting experience because "everything my mom wanted to write was very genuinely sincere." She recalls when they discussed how to fill out the "I spend a lot of time thinking about ..." section of her profile. "She wanted to put 'climate change,'" Schwartz says. "And then I said, 'Yeah, I think about climate change, but I am not putting that first.'" After discussing it further, climate change did make the list, albeit further down.

With the Coat Rack Monster, this common task will take an evil turn as the motion-activated meanie lunges out from behind the clothes. Know your horror genres

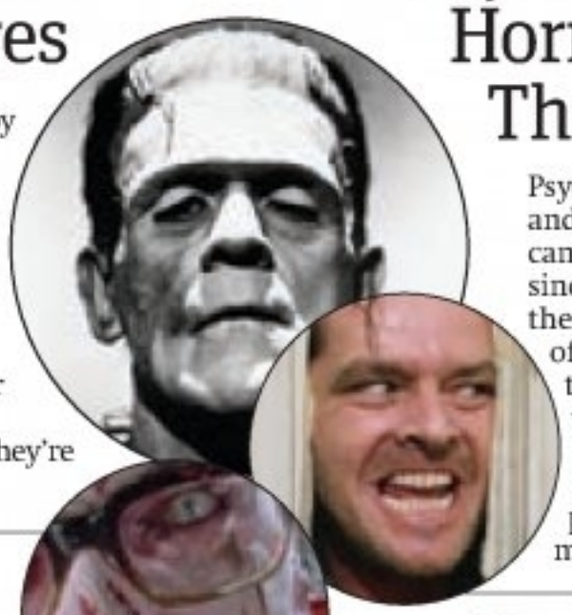
Whether it's a psychopath, monster, ghost or an everyman giving you the creeps, figure out your fear of choice.

METRO WORLD NEWS

Monsters/ Creatures



With appearances by Frankenstein and King Kong dating as far back as the early 1900s, monsters movies are the oldest, most diverse and widespread of the horror subgenres. The best ones hurt because they're misunderstood.

Psychological Horror and Thrillers

Psychological horror and thriller movies can feel the most real, since they deal with the complex nature of humans, whether they involve people who have become crazy or those trapped in physical or mental peril.

Gore

This genre is linked to pretty much all the genres mentioned here, but let's think about the ones that deal with some psycho going on a murdering spree because he or she just loves everything about killing and watching people die. We suggest the original "Texas Chainsaw Massacre."

Paranormal

The paranormal and "fear of the unknown" genre includes everything from ghosts to demons to witches. If it's a being from another realm, there's no telling what it'll do. We suggest "The Conjuring."

Zombies

Zombie movies could well be a part of the overarching monster genre, but the subgenre is so ubiquitous that it deserves a category of its own. Technically, zombies are dead humans who wake up from their graves, but in the past 20 years, newer works like "28 Days Later" and "The Walking Dead" have capitalized on our collective fear of acquiring viruses that turn us into these brain-eating creatures.

Flashlight Tour

Mutter Museum

$25, 215-563-3737

The collection of anatomical oddities at the Mutter Museum is creepy enough already. By flashlight, it ought to be Halloween material for sure — and maybe even scarier than imaginary frights like vampires or zombies.

This isn't your bubbe's gefilte fish

Eat here. Michael Solomonov's Abe Fisher updates traditional Jewish food — and it's good.

For Philadelphia restaurant fans, the names Steven Cook and Michael Solomonov — joined under the CookNSolo umbrella — are synonymous with adventurous, hearty food. Just look at the successes they've had with Old City's Zahav, South Street's Percy Street Barbecue and the citywide fried-chicken-and-donuts chain Federal Donuts.

Recently, the pair opened two spots on 16th and Sansom: Dizengoff, an ode to hummus, and Abe Fisher.

Though Dizengoff is exceptional, it's the latter that has the greater buzz, due to its modernist take on the Old World tastes of the Jewish Diaspora — "the food that we grew up on, only now turned upside down," says Yehuda Sichel, co-chef alongside Solomonov at Abe Fisher.

Though the original concept was dreamed up by Cook and Solomonov, credit Sichel, 28, for designing and executing the restaurant's twists on Jewish family cuisine, such as smoked sable, gefilte fish and schnitzel.

"We're looking to reinvent staples of Jewish dishes and make them really awesome," he says.

Sichel, a Baltimore native who trained at the Jerusalem School of Kosher Culinary Arts in Beit Shemesh, Israel, first came to the attention of the CookNSolo pair in 2008, shortly after Zahav, which features Israeli fare, opened.

"I was super-impressed by Zahav's high level of cooking," says Sichel. He joined the Zahav team, and then made the move to Citron and Rose, a kosher restaurant on the Main Line CookNSolo was consulting for.

Now at Abe Fisher, he has a lot more culinary freedom.

"Citron and Rose had restrictions due to being kosher," says Sichel. "With Abe Fisher's take

The twist

Odd pairings

The delicious oddity at Abe Fisher — where tradition meets innovation — is where Sichel shines the brightest.

Describing the veal schnitzel tacos, Sichel mentions his Hungarian grandparents' goulash and schnitzel: "I took the idea of trendy fish tacos and redefined it with braised veal shoulder in goulash with paprika and other Hungarian spices." The sable cake is modeled after Baltimore-style crab cakes that Sichel grew up with, and the stuffed trout gefilte fish is his "personal interpretation of the classic," served seared and hot rather than the typical cold dish.

Sichel is proud of the fact that Abe Fisher doesn't "do traditional."

"We're doing food we enjoy to eat," he says. "I think as long as it's from our kitchen, people will like it. I'm that confident."

Food fest. Mingle with celebrity chefs in AC at Savor Borgata

Street fairs don't usually include tables manned by celeb chefs like Bobby Flay and Geoffrey Zakarian — but Savor Borgata isn't your average one. The foodie weekend, Nov. 7 and 8, is designed to show off the casino-hotel's roster of top chefs who have eateries on-site, with cooking demos and classes, tastings and the Street Eats fair.

Bobby Flay, Wolfgang Puck, Geoffrey Zakarian, Stephen Kalt, restaurateur brothers Greg and Marc Sherry and Philly's own Michael Schulson (Sampan, Independence Beer Garden) will helm culinary stations during Street Eats. Mike Jerrick of Fox 29's "Good Day Philadelphia" will host.

Tickets for the Nov. 8 fair ($89) and full details on all of the Savor Borgata events are at www.theborgata.com. RACHEL VIGODA

It's almost not fair, having a haunted house in the cellblocks of a massive old stone prison — what other attraction could possibly compete? And while Eastern State Penitentiary no longer houses inmates, we're not convinced you won't spot one of their ghosts during a creeptastic outing through of the most popular Halloween attractions in the country. The very brave can opt to don a glow necklace and be marked for extra frights.

Insanity, zombies, blood, guts and gore — this is not kid stuff, and it's only gotten madder since they collapsed all their smaller shows into one big one last year. Afterward, you can get your picture taken with the monsters, which has led to some awesomely surreal Facebook posts.

Adrienne Theater

Horror and comedy already have a lot in common — scares depend as much on timing as laughs. So it's only natural that Philly Improv Theater is celebrating Halloween with this show, where the team will make up a new horror film on the spot each night. It'll be just like "Troll 2," except intentionally funny.

Obama is killing US greatness

President Obama and the Democrats in Congress in too many cases are moving America away from the very things that made this country great. This includes free markets, free enterprise, a strong military and a love of country. In addition, the president has also instituted unreasonable regulations that inhibit prosperity. For example, his regulations now make drilling for oil on federal lands very difficult. He has also stalled the construction of the Keystone Pipeline. That new oil pipeline would safely bring oil from private lands in North Dakota to Oklahoma where it can be refined. That would help make America more energy-independent.

Sykes' opposition envious

Re: 'Sykes must be kidding' (Metro, Oct. 22) I always get a chuckle when some letter writer who is financially challenged demonstrates his/her envy and rips into columnist Timothy Sykes. Maybe these writers should spend their free time learning how to invest rather than writing negatively about Mr. Sykes.

NBA to maintain lottery

The Sixers' dream of tanking in 2014-15 in order to get another top 3 pick looks to be in good shape, after the NBA owners voted to forgo changing the current lottery system. Several teams worry "about the unintended consequences and voted no to be able to do further study."

Eagles worst red zone team in entire league

NFL. The Birds' offense continues to fall flat inside the 20 yard line.

When the Eagles' offense finally gets healthy and hits its stride it will become the force everyone expected to see this season.

But for now the "O" struggles, especially in the red zone. The Eagles rank dead last in the league in scoring from within the 20.

"I think we spent a lot of time last week looking at situational football," Eagles offensive coordinator Pat Shurmur said. "We like to run the ball in the red zone, as you know. We try to stay balanced. ... I think it just came down to us being sounder and executing better in most situations."

Foles has completed less than 60 percent of his passes. / GETTY IMAGES

Cold zone

3.3

Eagles' red zone opportunities per game, the 14th most in the NFL. They are ranked last in red zone scoring.

The Eagles have scored a touchdown on 40 percent of their trips to the red zone. The Denver Broncos, ranked No. 1, score TDs at nearly an 80 percent clip.

Quite often, Nick Foles can be seen overthrowing a receiver in the back of the end zone. Nine of Cody Parkey's 12 field goals this season have been from less than 39 yards.

It is clear the Eagles are leaving points on the field.

"Offensively we're just trying to score points and lots of them," Shurmur said. "I mean, that's really what we're trying to do, and certainly more than our opponent on any given Sunday. So when you get in the red zone, it's very important that we connect when we're throwing the ball."

Why don't they run the ball more inside the 20-yard line? Just a few weeks ago in San Francisco, the Eagles could have run it up the gut with LeSean McCoy to score a go-ahead touchdown and they instead elected to call a pass.

Shurmur, like coach Chip Kelly, claims the team is committed to running the ball near the goal line.

"We believe in our ability to run the football and we'll continue to do it throughout the game," he said.
